Between Baton Rouge and New Orleans, along the Great River Road that follows the Mississippi, you'll find the South's largest antebellum mansion. With its massive white columns, 11-foot doors, and breathtaking hand-carved Italian marble fireplaces, the stately 53,000-square-foot mansion at Nottoway Plantation & Resort certainly stands apart. Surrounded by giant oaks and land that used to be a sugarcane plantation, Nottoway is just as defined by its extravagance as it is its tranquility.

Discover the plantation's history and explore its grounds on a guided or self-guided tour, then stay for a lovely meal at The Mansion Restaurant. Even better, spend the night in one of the guest suites or cottages beautifully appointed with vintage touches and ample luxury.
